Personal reflections

Anastassia Krutikova,

It was a very good experience to work in our group, because everybody was from different country and has its own cultural background and different level of knowing subjects. For me it was everything totally new, so that's why I sometimes didn't do my things around 100%. But most of the time I tried to work really hard and I wanted to be sure that all my work has been done and I always was interested how our group work is going. Andi. He was always on the top. He is smarter and has lots of experiences. He did his job very well - he did what he was supposed to do and always did more. Tako. He is very funny and energetic guy. He did always what he was supposed to do, but also always interested how our group work is going. Renata. She did her work what she was supposed to do and that's all. Most of the time I had the feeling that she is not just interested in it. In conclusion most of the time it was easy and enjoyable to work with other team members, because they were understandable, funny, hard working people and also a good listeners.

Renata,

Even if I am used to work by myself I think that being in a group is a really good idea. We have different characters and different opinions but when we put our efforts together we can do a pretty good job. I believe that working with people from different countries it is an unique experience. To be honest I've never worked with a group before, but things are looking pretty good so far. If we have any arguments we settle them between us until we reach a mutual decision, so nobody gets upset. We always listen to each others opinions and take them into consideration.

Andi Degn,

I feel like It's been a quite good effort from everyone in the group, not necessarily an even balance of work, but everyone have participated. I know I've probably "controlled" the process of the project a fair bit so I've spend a lot of my spare time to make everything as perfect as possible to the idea we originally thought out. I would say Renata has been a bit of an outsider. She's done what she was supposed to, but (in my opinion) hasn't really participated in the group. Takvor has been good at checking the group's progress with the project and asking if anything else needed doing. Anastassia has also tried to stay on top of things and been doing what she was supposed to do. I, myself, have been doing my part (which is coordinator) but also played the part of "checker" (as I have made sure everything was put together) and I think I've done a good job at both. I know I have a tendency at controlling things if no one stops me, so I think the project might show a bit more of my ideas than the others.

Takvor Takvoryan,

I think everyone has put in a 100 % effort in the assignment. It was hard for everyone, because no one of us has worked in a group. But everyone did his best. Andi made everything to be perfect. He is perfectionist and that is a good thing. Anastasia gave 120% to be on top. Renata was a little bit like outsider, she had done her part of the project but actually she didn't participated in the group as she should. I was the checker (when we'd started) then I was (actually I can't remember what role I took later) and I think I've done a good job at both. Also I tried to do everything correct and in time. But as a whole the project we've made is with a very good quality.
